

Kodiak Bears First To Move to New Zoo

Three not so little bears new home at Los Angeles awoke this morning in their new zoo, marking the start of a two-month task involving the moving of some 2,000 animals.

Three huge Kodiak Bears were moved yesterday and other species of the two North American Bears — the Grizzlies and the Black Bears — are scheduled for today. The mass moving of hundreds of mammals and birds will involve complex preliminary arrangements, according to Dr. Wesley A. Young, zoo director. Dr. Na, than Gale, assistant zoo director, will supervise all moving activities.

LARGER animals such as the bears will be tranquilized by the zoo veterinarian, Dr. Charles Sedgwick, before they are moved. A gun which shoots a dart containing a hypodermic needle will be used to tranquilize the animals.

the original crates in which they were first shipped to Los Angeles a year ago.

"ALL ANIMALS pose certain problems when moving them around," Dr. Gale continued. "For example, we will medicate the water of all the birds for several days before we move the several hundred species we have in the Griffith Park Zoo." Whenever humans take trips it is not unusual for one or more members of the family to come down with a cold or some other minor physical upset, he said. The same is true with birds; hence the preventative medication.

will be transported by vehicles except for the five elephants, Dr. Gale said. "These animals will have to provide their own power to make the trip of approximately one mile from the old zoo to the new one. We will walk them over early some morning before Griffith Park opens to the public."

AN INTERESTING complication has developed within the social structure of the five-animal herd. Dr. Gale pointed out. "Four of the animals are large females—three Indian and one African. The smallest of the herd is a two-year-old Indian bull elephant. While the big females 'mother' the little male a lot by watching over him in a protective manner, he is still the boss because he is the only male. Therefore, they will follow his lead."

The problem is that up until recently the small male was behaving reasonably well, but now has developed a mischievous streak.

"Since he is likely to decide to run off and explore once we get outside the zoo fence," Dr. Gale said, "We can no longer rely on him to lead the big females, because whatever he does the larger animals will try to do also;
